Abstract:

The Petroleum Industries Health Organization was based in the oil-rich areas of southern Iran about 100 years ago. The organization planted the original seedlings of the tall tree, introduced to improve the health of employees in Iran's oil industry in this region. As time passed, the seedlings grew to a great height and the tree has become one of the most important sources of health in the area. The author believes that research in the health of the county would not be complete without reference to the Petroleum Industries Health Organization and their important contribution.
